The Lake District

The Lake District is England's largest National Park. It is home to stunning mountains, beautiful lakes and thriving communities like Keswick.

Where is the Lake District?

The Lake District is located in the Northwest corner of England in the county of Cumbria.

The Landscape of the Lake District.

The Lake District is home to over 16 lakes, the largest is Windermere. There are also over 200 mountains, the largest is called Scafell Pike. Between the hills are many deep valleys with rivers running through them. Most of the land is grassy which makes it perfect for farming.

Living in the Lake District.

Despite being the largest National Park, only around 41,000 people live in the Lake District. Most of them rely on tourism to make money by running hotels and cafes.
