Still curled up tightly in a ball, Martha heard the long grass swishing near the log. Footsteps were coming closer. She held her breath. Then all of a sudden the footsteps started getting further away. She crept nervously towards the edge of the log and peeked out but there was no sign of the fox anywhere. Martha smiled. Carefully, she picked up the basket and sprinted back towards the lane, not stopping until she was home.

Once she was safely back, Martha set to work baking the most delicious strawberry tart! The whole mouse hole smelt wonderful. Martha couldn't wait to surprise her friend with the cake tomorrow or tell her about her lucky escape!
